

WEALTHY MAN A TROLLEY VICTIM

J. E. Humphreys, in Pump Business in Chambers Street for Years, Hit by Car While on Way to His Office.

AN OLD-TIME MERCHANT.

His Skull Fractured and Otherwise Hurt. He is in St. Vincent's Hospital in Serious Condition. Arrested Motorman Weeps.

Every morning for years, precisely at 8 o'clock, J. E. Humphreys, a wealthy manufacturer's agent, at No. 103 Chambers street, transferred from a Green-wich avenue car to a southbound Sixth avenue car at Sixth avenue and Eighth street, on his way to business from his home in West Fifteenth street.

He was at the junction point at the usual hour this morning, but the nearest southbound car was blocks away and he started across Sixth avenue to get a cigar. The noise of an "L" train passing overhead confused him. He stepped directly in front of a north-bound surface car.

He was thrown against an "L" pillar with such force that his skull was fractured in two places, his nose was broken, two ribs were crushed and internal injuries were sustained. At St. Vincent's Hospital, to which institution he was hurried in an ambulance, it is said he cannot recover.

Mr. Humphreys is about fifty-five years old and a bachelor. He was in the pump business in lower Chambers street before any of the men engaged in the trade there now established themselves. A business man of the old school, he was noted for his methodical habits. It was said of him jokingly that the clocks of the neighborhood were set by his arrival and departure.

When he did not appear at his office at 8 o'clock today his clerks knew that something serious had happened and they were not greatly surprised when an Evening World reporter informed them of the accident. None of them knows where Mr. Humphreys' relatives reside. It is believed that he came to this city from Canada.

On account of the rush of traffic at the corner when the accident occurred, accounts of it differ. Thomas Riley, of No. 25 Leroy street, motorman of the car that struck Mr. Humphreys, asserts that he had his car under control, but that the victim of the accident was half way down the block from Eighth street, and stepped out from behind a southbound car.

Others say there was no southbound car within three blocks in either direction, but that Mr. Humphreys started across the tracks so suddenly that the motorman had no time to stop his car. Riley was arrested and taken to the Mercer street police station. He went as he gave his account of the accident in the station house, saying it was the first time he had run over anybody for two years.

When Riley was arraigned in Jefferson Market Court, Magistrate Bradley complained that he could not tell anything about the condition of the injured man from the certificate of Dr. Bradshaw, the ambulance surgeon. Dr. Bradshaw was sent for.

"Is this your certificate?" asked the Magistrate. "O-h, I dunno," replied the doctor in a bored way. "Your certificates are always faulty," asserted the Magistrate. "I'm getting sick of it. Is this man in danger of death?"

"Oh, I dunno," was the reply. Then the doctor strode out of court, evidently indignant that he should have been disturbed over such a trifling matter.

Riley was ordered to the custody of an Inspector of the Metropolitan Street Railway Company.

P.-O. STOPPED MAIL OF THIS CONCERN.

Will Mark It "Fraudulent," but Manager Declares Business Is Perfectly Legitimate.

The Imperial Typewriter Company, which has been offering agents who will do work in leisure hours, is in trouble with the Post-office Department and Inspector Brown, to whom many complaints have been forwarded, announced today that he has ordered all mail addressed to the firm marked "fraudulent" and returned to the sender wherever possible. The other hand the manager of the company says it is perfectly legitimate and defies the department to stop his business.

The concern has had offices at No. 11 Beekman street and No. 121 Liberty street. They offer to supply enough work copying letters on a typewriter, and pay for this work at the rate of $15 per thousand copies. As security they ask that each applicant inclose $2.50 in his letter of application. The company has received from 500 to 1,000 letters daily for over 15 months, presumably including the required money. Complaints have been pouring into the Post-office for the past week and today H. D. Whitney, Assistant Post-office Inspector, again stated the case to Inspector Brown, who says he will like measures against the company.

LUNATIC FIGHTS TO STAY ON ROOF

Stranger Removes Outer Clothing and Prepares to Sleep on Top of Sawmill, Despite Policeman's Protestations.

SENT TO BELLEVUE PAVILION

Policeman Van Voort was hugging the curb at Tompkins and Houston streets early this morning when his attention was attracted by some dark object fitting about on the roof of a two and a half-story sawmill across the way.

In the dim light he was unable to distinguish outlines, and his first impression was that he was in the presence of a ghost. Backing into a doorway he looked again and was surprised to see a man's face peering over the corral which runs around the roof of the mill. As the policeman stepped out the head was suddenly drawn back.

Then Van Voort called out: "Hello, you, up there! What are you doing on that roof?"

"Couldn't fly down," the head answered and a voice shouted down: "Sayin' my prayers, you blankety blank idiot! What did you think I was doin'—skinnin' a fish?"

"Well, you come down at once, or you'll need to say a whole lot of prayers, see?"

The man merely grinned. In a moment he called out: "I say, policeman, do you think I'm a bird? And my name ain't Santos Dumont, either. How'd you expect I was goin' to get down?"

Van Voort was troubled. He tried the windows and doors of the mill and found them securely fastened. The man on the roof had disappeared. He hunted up Patrolman Boyne and the two proceeded a ladder from the watchman of a mill across the way. With this they made their way cautiously to the roof.

All Ready to Retire.
Here they found the intruder preparing to go to sleep. He had removed his outer clothes and, using them as a pillow, was stretched at full length upon the cold, damp roof.

For a moment he eyed the policemen and then sprang to his feet with a yell. There was a fierce fight, which ended with the policeman sitting on the man's prostrate form.

"Now, will you go down?" asked Van Voort.

"Not by the ladder," was the laconic reply.

"You won't, eh?"

"Not on your life, just try it."

Van Voort scratched his head.

Lowered Him by a Rope.
"I have it," he said. "We'll just get a rope and lower him down."

In a few moments the rope was at hand and then began another struggle. The policeman threw his prisoner down, let him hand and foot and fastened one end of the rope under the man's arms. Two turns were taken around a convenient chimney, and with a "Heave ho!" the prisoner was lowered to the street.

At the station-house he refused to give his name and was sent to Bellevue for observation.

A Heart to Heart Talk with You.

As he peered before the cage I observed he was in tears. And he murmured, "Yes, I've seen them, from the reptiles to the deer. I have watched the strange Ophiophagus, and the Jabberwock, beside. I have seen the Basilisk, the Basilisk, with his tongue opened wide. I have chinned with the Chimpanzee, I have fed the Silvermen. I have seen the mate to every beast that ever I have seen. But the strangest beast is missing, which is why I weep and rage. They haven't got a janitor! I've looked in every cage!"

If this were called to the attention of the people who conduct New York's wonderful Zoo doubtless they would immediately supply the deficiency. Maybe, off in some sequestered nook of the Zoo, which is four times bigger than any other in the world, there is a janitor. At any rate, everything else under the sun, from a gnat to agnu, can be found there, and that is why the New York Zoo is taken as No. 3 in the Sunday World's great series of articles on "The Wonders of New York, the Wonder City of the World." You will open your eyes when you read of its marvels and realize what it is. A double-page feature, finely illustrated.

O H, I am in the saddle, and I hear the hoofs' deep bay. They're leading me a dandy chase, this fine November day. They snuff the pungent aniseed, and trace it to its lair. No sport in all the wondrous world can equal this, I swear! But see, upon yon grassy hill, a monstrous beast appears! The hounds are now in full retreat, and I—I share their fears! Hark, hear me home, my noble steed, upon thy sturdy back. For oh, that beast which we have seen, they tell me, is a FOX.

That is about the way some of your "cross-country riders" would act if they should see a real fox while out fox-hunting. But there are comparatively few of this class, for Society is not all sham, and in its ranks are often found people who follow a sport because they like it and understand it. New York especially has its "hunting set," which maintains valuable packs of hounds and rides across country in true sportsman fashion. It's an expensive fad, but a very interesting one, and you will enjoy knowing more about it and its devotees.

S Her "Views" on Marriage topics, just to set the public right, she wrote them, says, she wrote them, and her views were somewhat warm. So they made a lot of clamor and produced a verbal storm. 'Twas then she met a fellow and she married him ere long. And now her life conjugal is one long, glad, sweet song. Excepting when they quarrel, for 'tis then that he will quote From that early "Views on Marriage," which she can't deny she wrote.

Writing anything that you really mean is a dangerous thing. You generally live to have to take it back. So to Miss Mary MacLane, who has written for the Sunday World her views on Marriage, we hold up the finger of warning. Maybe she will get married some day. Indicate a point that way in present, for she admits that her previous "Views" on the same topic, as published in her famous book, were not quite right, and modifies them considerably. But these latest "Views" are even more radical in certain respects and quite the most entertaining thing this clever young person has done in a good while.

I HERE are many things of interest for every one to read.
